PLAN EARLY START WITH STREET OILING

Oil Petitions to be Received Before April Fifteenth This Year in Order to Patch-Up Before Treatment.

Under a new policy adopted by the city commission, oiling petitions will have to be filed with the council by April 15th, as Superintendent of Streets P. J. Goodman will make an early start in treating the streets this year in order to obtain better results. It is the aim of Superintendent Goodman to have the petitions filed as early as possible in order that repairs and alterations may be made upon the streets during the spring months, to insure that the oil will have full effect. When the first dry and warm weather comes, the street department will start cleaning-up, patching and repairing the streets, which are to be oiled. This year the oiling will be done by districts at a considerable saving of time. Under the new policy, streets in a ward or a stipulated district will be oiled all at the same time, and the street workmen will then leave the district to work in another. This will enable them to do all the oiling at once, according to a pre-arranged system, on streets that have been cleaned and patched up, leveled, graded to receive the oil.

The filing of the petitions will also enable the city to determine just how much oil will have to be purchased in the contract, thereby obtaining a more favorable price. It is estimated that the city expects to have the oiling completed two months earlier than last year, which will allow the property owners a longer time in which to enjoy the improved condition of the streets. This is the fifth year that streets in this city have been oiled and as many thoroughfares have been oiled for three and four years in succession, they will not need the treatment this year. There is no question but that the oiling has proved of value in that it has preserved the macadam and dirt streets from the ravages of traffic and weather. The city is now receiving bids on two pressure oiling attachments for the two wagons now in use. The new apparatus will be attached to the wagons, displacing the old devices used to spread the oil. With the pressure system a more even and regulated flow of the oil is forced into the pavement so that it penetrates into the crown to form a binder for the same. The heating plant, which caused the delay last year, has been placed in condition for the heating of the oil as it is unloaded from the oil tanks and will be ready for use at demand. With the improved distributors and a more thorough cleaning and patching of the streets, Superintendent Goodman expressed a belief that oiling would achieve better results than any year previous.

All unimproved streets have to have a petition signed by owners showing at least half of the property abutting on the streets owned by them. On unimproved and paved streets the oil is empowered to order the oiling without a petition. The cost for the oiling will be five cents per running foot.

GRIMM IS SUSTAINED IN DEMURRAGE CASES

Supreme Court Hold Law Unconstitutional in Decision on Rock County Cases.

The supreme court on Tuesday upheld the decision of Judge Grimm of the circuit court for Rock county declaring unconstitutional the so-called demurrage law. The decision was made in the suits by the C. & N. W. and C. M. & St. P. railroads against the Rock County Sugar company, the latter company being the appellant.

The demurrage law was passed by the legislature three years ago and provided that a shipper should be entitled to as much additional time in unloading freight as the railroad consumed in excess of twenty-five miles a day in transporting the freight from the shipping point to the destination point. The two railroad companies in the lower court contended that the law was unconstitutional and recovered judgments for small amounts against the sugar company for demurrage charges on shipments of sugar beets.

Tuesday's Markets.
Chicago, Feb. 23.—An advance of 10¢ to 20¢ in hog values yesterday carried the average price to $8.39, or highest point since Oct. 18, the high day last year.

Smallest Tuesday receipts of swine in four months and good shipping orders were principal strengthening factors. Limited offerings kept several packers out of the trade. Armour houses were idle.

Yesterday's cattle trade fairly active at Monday's best prices, with tendency higher. Choice 960-lb. steers sold at Illinois feeders at $7.70, while 1,627-lb. fat steers sold at $8.60. Average price of hogs at Chicago was $8.39, against $8.26 Monday, $8.08 a week ago, $6.61 a year ago and $8.67 two years ago.

Lively Trade in Cattle.
Trade in cattle yesterday was lively at the recent advance in values. Beef steers sold largely at $7.60@8.35 or 25¢ above late last week. Only packers' receipts are in sight for the near future. Quotations:

Choice to fancy steers... $8.60@9.70
Poor to good steers... 7.40@8.50

Native bulls and stags... 4.70@7.70
Feeding cattle, 600@1,100 lbs... 5.70@7.35
Poor to fancy veal calves... 3.75@11.25

Hog Receipts Small.
Bad roads, last week's drop in light weights and bulliness of country holders were given as reasons for yesterday's small run of 17,000 hogs. The market was strong all day, with sales largely 15c higher. Trade closed very firm, with still higher prices predicted. Quality good for Tuesday. Quotations:

Bulk of sales... $8.30@8.50
Heavy butchers and ship-ping... 8.40@8.55

SELECTION OF GOOD SEED TO AVOID DISEASED GRAINS

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE]

Madison, Feb. 23.—Farmers are urged to take great care to prevent smut and blights in their crops this year by making a proper selection of seed, in a bulletin issued today by the cultural experiment station. Smuts and blights were unusually severe during the 1911 season on account of the cold, damp weather and the bulletin states that it is apt to be more prevalent this year unless the seed is properly treated with the formalin solution consisting of one pint of formalin to thirty gallons of water.

Losses in past years have amounted to from one-third to one-half the crop from smut, and farmers should take great care this season," states the bulletin.

PAPER.

The question of paper is fast becoming one of concern to the world over. In this country it is the question of dyes and bleaching matter which causes the most concern. Paper mills, while running full force, are compelled to raise their prices materially owing to the shortage of needed articles in the manufacture. It is even intimated that white paper may soon become a scarce commodity unless some means is found to manufacture the needed materials in this country.

The Christian Science Monitor, writing of paper, says recently:

"From time to time, almost from the very earliest days of the war, there has arisen in many European countries a shortage of paper. Many factories, often unlooked for, have contributed to bringing about this result, a scarcity of labor, the increased cost of shipping freights, and deficiency in the supply of the many and various ingredients which go to the making of paper, in all its many forms of today."

"A story is told of how, something more than eleven hundred years ago—to be precise it was in the year 751—a Chinese force marched on Samarkand, and which for some years had been occupied by the Arabs, thinking to take the city and the trade route."

The Arab governor, however, was an able general, and marshaled his men well. He not only repelled the invasion, but took up a vigorous pursuit of the invaders. He captured prisoners. Amongst them he found men who were skilled in the art of making paper, and that was the beginning of it. The craft quickly spread throughout the Arab dominions and, in process of time, trade brought the products to Greece. The Chinese practice of writing about that time speaks of the paper as Greek parchment, and there is a record that the Empress Irene used it for the framing of certain rules for the nuns of Constantinople.

"It was only the paper, however, that came, and not the art of making it. This was first introduced into Europe by the Moors, also about the Twelfth century. They held a great part of Spain in those days, and the industry quickly grew. It was good paper, cloth parchment, it is styled by the laws of Alfonso of 1263, and well styled, for it was stout of substance, and could withstand much hard use."

At Xativa, Valencia and Toledo the industry grew and flourished until the fall of the Moorish power. And then came a change. The Christian conquerors were less skilled, and the great industry deteriorated, both as to quantity and quality. Meanwhile, however, the Arabs had brought their knowledge of the craft with them when they invaded Sicily. The oldest known document on paper is a deed of King Roger of Sicily, bearing the date of 1092. From Sicily paper making ultimately spread to Italy, and there it became a great industry. From Italy it extended to France and Germany. In 1279 Pado de Fabriano was making paper, in Italy, from rags and fax, and, a short time afterwards, regular mills appeared in Padua and Treviso. Nine years or so later the famous Stoumer is setting up his paper mills in Nuremberg, and taking an oath, of truly awesome solemnity, from his men that they will keep secret his processes.

"And then the art reached England, and, in Wynkyn de Worde's 'De Proprietatibus Rerum,' printed in 1495 at Caxton's Press, we find mention of a paper mill at Stevenage in Herefordshire, kept by one John Tate. Master Spielman, with his ten years' license from Queen Elizabeth to make paper at Darford in Kent, is the first figure in the English paper trade, and so on to the establishment of the famous mills at Maidstone, where John Whatman turned out his paper in and around the year 1760. In 1769 came machinery, and, from the small mill at Boxmoor in Herefordshire, where Fourdrinier, the inventor, first set up his plant, the industry spread all over the country. With the repeal of the paper duty, in 1859, the long story of paper making reaches our own times."

WILSON'S REPUTATION.

"Our platform is not intended to catch flies. It means business. It is the utterance of earnest and honest men who intend to do business along those lines, and who are not waiting to see whether they can catch votes with those promises before they determine whether they are going to act on them or not." So spoke Woodrow Wilson, addressing a political meeting on August 15, 1912, just one month after his nomination for president.

"Our platform is one of principles which we believe to be essential to our national welfare. Our pledges are made to be kept when in office, as well as relied on during the campaign." So read the democratic national platform on which Mr. Wilson had been nominated. And that platform contained this pledge: "We favor a single presidential term, and to that end urge the adoption of an amendment to the constitution making the president of the United States ineligible for re-election, and we pledge the candidate of this convention to this principle."

"In order, therefore, to satisfy the technical requirements of the statutes of the State of Ohio, I hereby consent to the use of my name as a candidate for the presidency by any candidate who seeks to be elected a delegate to the democratic national convention which is to assemble in June." So wrote Woodrow Wilson on January 14, 1916, to Charles Q. Hildebrand, secretary of the state of Ohio. So clearly is Mr. Wilson convicted by his own words that no comment is necessary.

SIMPLY LA FOLLETTE.

It was not a harmonious, get-together progressive republican dinner and meeting at Madison, Tuesday. It was a La Follette endorsement gathering. Men who went to Madison expecting to find the right hand of fellowship extended to all progressive republicans came away disappointed. The meetings were held to boom La Follette in his campaign for delegates for his presidential bid at the national republican convention. To say words of praise for the senator and words of condemnation for the men who are of the conservative stripe. Everything La Follette thinks of, or believes, was extolled, and anything he frowned on was condemned in careful speeches, prepared and doubtless censored in advance. It was a La Follette gathering pure and simple and nothing more can be made of it by even the most conservative of the ultra progressive writers.

WINTER VACATIONS.

The doings at southern and other winter resorts take much space at this season in all journals featuring society news. The business of entertaining winter rest-seekers looks like a big one from the extent of advertising done. A great deal of money is spent, though much of it comes from a class of wealthy people able to afford long journeys.

Unfortunately the winter vacation is a dream as yet unrealized by the great mass of hard working people. But it is probable that most persons can do as much in 48 weeks out of the 52, as in sticking to the job without any rest.

Railroad literature gives an enormous number of hotels and boarding houses in southern resorts that entertain company from winter latitudes. The American leisure classes and the people who can cut loose at will for play times are fast growing as wealth increases.

The life at these southern resorts is ideal for health and pleasure, preferable in some respects to that at the populous summer capitals. At the latter people often spend their time in picture shows and dancing halls. The real nature and outdoor life that a vacation is supposed to exist for is neglected. At the winter resorts the occupations are golf, tennis, riding, bathing, and all the real open air pastimes.

Every one who quits his task for such pleasures must regret that they are barred to the great mass of people in the stuffy offices and shops of a northern winter. But the vacation habit seems to demoralize the complicated and artificial mechanism of modern industry. Railroad travel is costly. The traveler is taxed by hirelings at every turn. Perhaps at some future period when life is simpler and less fiercely competitive, there will be more leisure and more frequent outings for all workers.

Milton News

Milton, Feb. 23.—Last evening in the auditorium at Milton college there was given a very pleasing concert by Miss Nellie Bentley, teacher of the violin at the college, assisted by Miss Lillian Wright, mezzo-soprano, of Chicago, and Mrs. Ethel Robinson Grubb, reader of Edgerton.

Miss Bentley played with remarkable ease and brilliancy. Her intonation was faultless. Among her selections were parts of the concerto in D minor by Wieniawski, and the Viennese caprice by Fritz Kreisler, both of which she played in a masterly manner. Her very clear playing of harmonics was shown in a Hungarian scene by J. Huby, in which also she did some fine playing of arpeggios.

Miss Wright has a voice of rare power and sweetness. All her selections were rendered with perfect taste and sympathetic feeling. In the magnificent aria from Samson and Delilah, "My Heart and Thy Sweet Voice," by Saint-Saens, she rose to a height of passion and tenderness rarely attained except by operatic celebrities.

Mrs. Grubb showed wisdom and taste in choosing selections for which she was admirably fitted. A scene from "As You Like It," with some interesting humorous selections gave interest and variety to a very pleasing program, which was worthy of a larger audience than the unpleasant evening afforded.

WILL P. SAYLES, "Reliable Jeweler" Successor to Hall & Sayles

Have You Paid That Small Account You Owe the Merchant?

This is the third day of "PAY UP WEEK."

On Monday there was a splendid response to the suggestion. The results for Tuesday were even better. Today's report will likely prove still more encouraging.

Janesville has grasped the spirit of the movement. Everybody is "PAYING UP."

Merchants all over the city are deeply gratified at the way the people have responded. It seems that it was only necessary to call the attention of the citizens to the great results that were sure to follow a universal "PAYING UP" of last year's bills. They are coming up cheerfully with the coin. And they are enjoying the sensation just as much as the merchants are. Why shouldn't they? The bills must be met some time and it just as well to meet them now when the money will do the most good.

This spirit is commendable. It is the spirit that spells good things ahead for Janesville. There is nothing like the help-one-another policy. It works wonders. And the movement is giving Janesville a lot of gilt-edged publicity. The newspapers of the other cities are commenting on it and pronounce it a great idea. When it comes to great ideas Janesville leads the procession, especially when the ideas tend to build up the city.

And now it is up to everybody to make "PAY UP WEEK" a great success. Keep the dollars a-rolling until Saturday night. That will be your share in the great movement. We are going to have another prosperous year and if you do your share you will have no regrets coming.

Three more days, REMEMBER.

NEWS NOTES from MOVIELAND

67 DAISY DEAN

Mme. Petrova, who has now given her stage engagements altogether, to devote herself exclusively to the production of distinctive photoplays, has her first picture well under way. It is called "The Soul Market," and presents an intensely dramatic story built around society and the stage which will call for the highest display of Mme. Petrova's emotional powers. "The Soul Market" was written especially for Mme. Petrova by Aaron Hoffman, the well known author and playwright. The general character, that of a prima donna, which is essayed by Mme. Petrova, is somewhat different from the vampire roles she has had in the past. It is believed that it will give her far greater scope for her distinctive dramatic gifts than any vehicle in which she has yet appeared on the screen, and it is certain to put her versatility in character portrayal to a supreme test.

Following "The Soul Market," Mme. Petrova will immediately begin work on another five-part screen production, "The Scarlet Woman." Next she will be seen in "Playing With Fire."

ALEXANDER GADEN AS UPRIGHT YOUNG JUDGE

Alexander Gaden will star in the picture "I Accuse." The story was written by Miss Marjorie Howe, and the scenario made by the studio, George D. Proctor. It was released Feb. 21. Miss Helen Marten will play opposite Mr. Gaden. She was last seen opposite a star in "Lions in Love," the photoplay in which Hal Forde starred.

In "I Accuse" Mr. Gaden will be seen as an upright young judge who is forced to sentence to prison the father of the girl he loves. The photoplay is a five-reel feature.

Malvina Longfellow, known as the most beautiful model and most photographed girl in America, will be seen in the photoplay production of "The Fool's Revenge," directed by W. S. Davis. Miss Longfellow but recently arrived from London after the safe return of her husband from the front.

THE GIRL AND THE GAME ...

Copyright 1915 by Frank H. Spearman.

Inside the office a perplexed and disgruntled group gathered around Helen. She showed the dispatcher's message to the conductor. Seagrue, not to be outwitted, came inside to watch the proceedings and demanded to know again of the puzzled conductor whether the ties were not plainly enough for him. In the face of the conflicting evidence the conductor did not know what to decide. "Fight it out yourselves, boys! I give it up," was all that could be got out of him. And Seagrue, declaring he would unload the ties anyway, left the office. Once outside, he again spurred Delaney to haste.

Storm followed Seagrue from the office and once outside and away from Helen he protested vigorously. Rhineland, behind him, told Storm to keep cool. At that moment Delaney, breaking in almost precipitately a riot, "Get out of this thing," he bellowed at Storm, "and keep out! Do you get that? You're talking too much."

With the words, he pushed Storm back. It was the wrong moment to lay hands on the stalwart young engineer, now greatly wrought up. His arm shot out and his fist caught Delaney on the jaw. The big foreman staggered.

Seagrue, glad enough to find himself outside the center of the brawl, walked away only to encounter Spike as the latter, dashing in from the highway, sprang from his horse and hurriedly beckoned Seagrue to him.

The two conferred in quick undertones together and Rhineland, who stood with Helen and Lyons, watching them, saw them run to the tie cars, remove the billing cards and bring them back. Seagrue, with the air of a man aggrieved, showed the cards to Rhineland.

"What do you say to this?" he demanded, in the confirmation of his claims. "Call off your men. They're starting a riot here to keep me from taking possession of my own property."

Rhineland, as near angry as he ever got, stamped his foot. "I tell you those ties don't belong to you. It's some trickery and thievery your gang has put up on us. This way, Lyons!"

Accompanied by the agent, Helen following, Rhineland entered the station. Helen went to her desk to wire for a confirmation of the dispatcher's message. As she did this, her eyes fell on the clip on which had been filed the duplicate of Spike's message to Seagrue. Across it she had thrown her crocheted work and her eye was now met by the words of the cipher message as Spike had meant the secret message to be read by Seagrue:

"Changed ties Rhineland to Seagrue."

Started, she called to Rhineland. With Lyons, the latter read the message as she now pointed it out to them. The two men saw the import at once. But outside the station Spike and Seagrue were listening. "You see you're caught," muttered Seagrue to Spike. "They'll wire for confirmation and help. We're in for trouble."

"No trouble at all," declared Spike coolly. "I'll save them the work of wiring."

"How?"

"By clipping their wire. Just keep cool, Seagrue. I'll get you through."

Spike, without delay, climbed a pole and with a pair of clippers made good his threat.

Helen, sitting at the instrument, was trying to call. She stopped. "The wires are cut," she exclaimed.

Mme. Petrova.

Three elaborate five-part features, to be released during the present year, have already been prepared by Mme. Petrova, famous emotional star.

Melville declares that the wicker bonnet she will wear in her screen comedies is the same headcovering that she wore for ten years on the stage. Her company is thinking of getting out an insurance policy on the bonnet.

(Notices furnished by the theatres)

AT MYERS THEATRE.

The Myers theatre will have an attraction next Saturday, Feb. 26, matinee and evening, in "A Pair of Sixes," which has been anticipated with much interest, for it is now acknowledged the world over as one of the funniest farces ever seen on the English-speaking stage. It has been running for nearly a year at the Longacre theatre, New York, and it is the reigning success in the west. No play has ever received more unstinted praise for its bright and amusing story, clever dialogue and skilfully conceived situations. It is in three acts and is by Edward Peple, the well-known author of "The Littlest Rebel" and "The Prince Chap."

The curtain rises on the office of the Bureau Digestive Pill company. It appears to be a nice orderly office with the attractive, gum-chewing typist, until the two partners enter and begin to quarrel. The one, T. Boggs John, who runs to fat in figure, claims he is the blood and brains of the pill business, and the other, George B. Nitto, iterates and reiterates that he is by no means the "bone and fat" of the organization. They become all "het up" and decide to dissolve. They call in their lawyer and quarrel again over the terms of dissolution which he proposes, until he finally suggests that they play a hand of show-down poker, the loser to become the winner's valet for a year with a thousand and one penalties in fines for misbehavior or breach of contract. After a lot of bluffing and hooting over the game, T. Boggs John loses and we next see him installed as the valet in Mr. Nettleton's household. His true position there is a secret to all but Nettleton, and it becomes particularly embarrassing when his sweetheart arrives and he dare not tell her of the reason for this menial position, for fear of the heavy penalties imposed by his contract. To make matters worse, he becomes the victim of an eccentric English housemaid, who sets her cap for him. This amusing complication of affairs is continued with undying interest, and with a rapid-fire action of hilarious fun that does not cease until the final curtain.

AT THE PRINCESS.

Thomas Jefferson in Picture Tonight.

Tully Marshall gives a very convincing and thrilling delineation of the wily, implacable Chinese half-breed, John Soy, in "The Sable Lord," to be shown at the Princess Theatre tonight and tomorrow. This Fine Arts film play is adapted from the powerful novel by Horace Hazel and represents the high degree of realism attained by the Triangle people in dealing with the life and ways of an alien race.

Thomas Jefferson, skillful actor in his own right and by his inheritance from his renowned father, has the double roles of the two Cameron brothers, Robert and Donald, to play, and he is equally at home as the lovable man of means and as the derelict.

Ford Sterling in Comedy. A father who would crush a romance in the bud, but who succumbs to the wiles of his son's sweetheart, is amusingly depicted by Ford Sterling in "His Father's Footsteps," coming to the Princess Theatre tonight. This is the first appearance of Mr. Sterling in the new Triangle-Keystone, and his funmaking is as lively as ever.

AT THE APOLLO.

Tremendous Scenes in "Lydia Gilmore."

There have appeared on the stage within the last few years several big dramas in which a sensational trial scene in the court room was one of the big "punches." But in these various plays, the wit and the repartee of the lawyers and persons on the stand was largely responsible for the effectiveness of the scene. When Henry Arthur Jones, the celebrated playwright, wrote his big drama, "Lydia Gilmore," he devised one of the most gripping scenes imaginable, the power of which lay in the situation, and not in the dialogue.

For that reason the Famous Players Film Company has chosen "Lydia Gilmore" as a starring vehicle for Pauline Frederick, who has been so aptly called "Frederick the Great," by one of the screen reviewers. This Paramount picture, which is the attraction at the Apollo tonight, lends itself admirably to screen adaptation because the strength of the play lies in the situations and not in the dialogue.

If a young man is compelled to run in debt for a nine dollar wedding ring for his intended wife, the day before marriage, what will he do for bread and butter after the honeymoon?

This forenoon a dray horse belonging to a man named Russell started from the west side and ran over East Milwaukee street at full speed. It was not much used to such frolics, and made a rather poor hand at getting up a furious and sensational runaway. He was stopped at Bluff street, near one of the livery stables.

SAXON "SIX"

A big touring car for five people

Saxon High Speed Motor --this year's favored type

Saxon engineers know that a small sized gasoline motor running at high speed gives as much power as a larger motor of the slow speed type. At the same time it consumes far less gasoline, and greatly reduces the weight of the car.

Those are facts which Saxon engineers have developed and which all engineers now recognize. So today the high speed motor is the ideal of most designers.

Saxon "Sixes" are built with the wonderful Saxon high speed motor. Experts marvel at its power. Ralph De Palma, the world's greatest racing driver, said the feat of Saxon "Six" in climbing the steep three-mile mountain road at Uniontown, Pa., in 4 minutes and 4 seconds was "the most astounding feat I ever saw."

The smoothness and flexibility of Saxon "Six" are a constant delight to owners. To them two miles an hour "on high" is not a "stunt" performance, but an ordinary incident in daily driving. Except for starting the car, gear shifting is practically unknown to Saxon "Six" drivers.

Saxon "Six" also offers you many other features of advanced motor car design. Quiet among them are: Light weight with ample strength, saving tires and gasoline; beautiful yacht-line body, the most modern type of body; ample room for all five passengers.

Fully to appreciate this car you must see it. Come in today.

Mr. Moore of Park Ave. Tells of an interesting experience.

There is nothing like a talk with one of our own citizens for giving hope and encouragement to the anxious sufferer from the dread kidney disease. We, therefore, give here an interview with a Janesville man: S. E. Moore, carpenter, 615 Park Ave. Janesville, says: "I think the greatest and stooping I did in my life was responsible for my kidneys coming out of order. I had pains through the small of my back. When I awoke in the morning, I used different medicines, but wasn't benefited until I took Doan's Kidney Pills. They quickly stopped the pain in my back, my kidneys began to do their work as they should and I was able to continue without suffering."

Lime-Loss in Tuberculosis

In the Journal of the American Medical Association (January 17, 1914) has been many times stated that in tuberculosis or in the pre-tuberculous stage an increased amount of calcium (lime) is lost. Both the urine and feces. In fact, a demineralization has been thought to be a forerunner of the development of tuberculosis.

Forced feeding of tuberculosis patients and the enormous amount of eggs and milk once given such patients are not now considered advisable by a large number of physicians who are specializing in the treatment of pulmonary tuberculosis.

The steam of Collingford's wine glass snapped between his fingers. "I'm sorry," he said, laying the pieces aside. He smiled a little nervously on the three tense faces before him. "I don't tell that story often. It goes too deep. Not everybody understands. Some people call Wayne no better than a murderer; but I'm not one of them. And Bodsky says there have been a lot of murderers he'd like to take to his club."

"J. Y., there's somebody listening at the door," said the captain. "Bea there some time."

J. Y. swung around and threw open the door. He sprang forward and caught Clem in the act of flight. He brought her back into the room and set down, holding her upright beside him. J. Y. was proud and for a moment Collingford's presence gladdened him. "What were you doing, Clem?" he asked.

Clematis was in that degree of embarrassment and disarray which makes lovely youth a shade more lovely. Her brown hair was tumbled about her face and down her back. Her cheeks were flushed and her thin white neck seemed to tremble above the deep red of her slightly yoked frock. Her lips were moist and parted in excitement. She was sixteen and beautiful beyond the reach of hackneyed phrases. The four men fixed their eyes upon her, and she dropped hers. "I was eavesdropping," she said in a voice that was very low but clear.

"Why, Clem?" said J. Y. gravely. "Clem looked around on the four men. She did not seem afraid. Unconsciously they waited for her to go on, and she did. "Mr. Collingford was telling about Alan. I heard Charlie say he was going to. I shall always eavesdrop when anyone tells about Alan."

For a second her auditors were stunned by the audacity. Collingford's face was the first to light up and his hand came down on the table with a bang. "Butly for you, young 'un," he cried and his clear laugh could be heard on the lawn. Before it was over, the judge joined in, the captain grunted his merriest grunt and J. Y. patted Clem's shoulder and smiled.

Clem was of the salt of the earth among woman-kind—the kind that waits to weep till the battle is over and then becomes a thousand times more dear in her weakness. Her big eyes had been welling with tears and now they jumped the barrier just as Nance rushed in and cried, "What are you all laughing at?" Then she caught sight of Clem. From her she looked around on the men. "You four big hulking brutes," she said. "Come to me, Clem, my darling. What have they been doing to you? There, there, don't cry. Men are silly things. What if they did laugh at you?"

Clem was sobbing on Nance's shoulder. "It isn't that," she gasped. "I don't mind—that! But Mr. Collingford called me a 'young one.'"

The three gray-heads kept their faces with difficulty. Collingford leaped to his feet. "My dear young lady—Miss Clematis—" he stammered. "My word, now! I didn't mean it. Swear I didn't. I'd do anything if you'll only stop crying. Do stop and listen to me, I'll grovel."

It took him an hour to make his peace.

CHAPTER XII

Many they were who drank at the fountain of hospitality in Maple House and to all, quiet Mrs. J. Y. held out the measured cup of welcome with impartial hand. But once in a while one came who made the rare appeal to the heart. Such a one was Collingford. For all his wanderings, his roughing, and his occasional regression to city drawing rooms and ultra-country houses, Collingford fitted into the Hill—he belonged.

On Sunday night they were gathered on the lawn, all but Clem who sat at the piano beside an open window and poured her girl's voice out over the rippling keys. Her voice was thin and clear like a mountain brook hurrying over pebbles and like the brook it held the promise of coming fullness.

Collingford sat by Mrs. J. Y., a little apart from the others. They had not talked. Mrs. J. Y. broke a long silence when she said, in a full low voice that somehow seemed related to Clem's thin trail. "We are very quiet here."

Collingford looked thoughtfully at his glowing clear end. "The best parts of life are quiet," he answered.

"Do you really like it?" said Mrs. J. Y., almost shyly. "Englishmen of your class generally fall to the lot of our landed and chateauxed."

"My dear Mrs. Wayne," said Collingford, "I've been sitting here in a really troubled silence trying to think out how to ask you to make it a week for me instead of a week-end."

Mrs. J. Y.'s laugh was happy but low. It did not disturb the others. Collingford went on. "I know America pretty well for an Englishman. I thought I had done the whole country, from Albuquerque to Newport. But you are right. When we're not roughing it out West, we visiting Englishmen are pretty apt to be rubbing up against the gilded high-lights of the landed and the chateauxed. This—Collingford waved his cigar to embrace the whole of Red Hill—is something new to me—and old. It's the sort of thing Englishmen think of when they are far from home. I have never seen it before in America."

"And yet," said Mrs. J. Y., "there are thousands of quiet homes in America just like it in spirit. In spite of all our divorces—all our national linen-washing in public—our homes are to-day what they always have been, the backbone of the country. The social world is in turmoil everywhere and America is in the throes no less than England. Our backbone is under a strain and some think it is breaking, but I don't." She turned her soft eyes on Collingford and smiled. "There," she added, "I have been polemic but one seldom has the chance to spread the good fame of one's country. I am glad you can give us a week instead of a week-end."

Collingford heard someone speak of Mrs. Lansing and he said to Mrs. J. Y., "I know a Mrs. Lansing—a beautiful and scintillating young person—the sort of effervescence that dies over to Europe and becomes the dismay of our smart women and the fate of many men."

Mrs. J. Y. for a second was puzzled. "That isn't Mrs. Lansing—it's Mrs. Gerry you're thinking of. Mrs. Lansing is her mother-in-law. They live next door."

The next morning, with Clem as cicerone, Collingford went over to the Firs to pay his respects to Alix. They found her under the trees. "How do you do?" said Alix. "The Honorable Percy, isn't it?" "What a memory you have for trifles," said Collingford, laughing. "May I sit down?" "Do," said Alix. She was perched in the middle of a garden seat. On each side of her were piled various stuffs and all the paraphernalia of the sewing circle. Collingford sat down before her and stared. Clem had gone off in search of game more to her taste. Alix seemed to him very small. He felt the change in her before he could see in what it lay. She seemed still and restful in spite of her flying fingers. Spiritually still. Her eyes, glancing at him between stitches, were amused and grave at the same time.

"Doll's clothes?" said Collingford, warring at a beribboned morsel.

"No," said Alix. Collingford stared a little longer and then he broke out with, "Look here, what have you done with her? Over there, the young Mrs. Lansing—spice, devilry, scintillation and wit—blinding. Over here, Mrs. Gerry—demure and industrious. Don't tell me you have gone in for the Quaker pose, but please tell me which is the poseuse: you now or the other one."

Alix laughed. "I'm just me now, minus the devilry and all that. Come, I'll show you what I've done with it."

They threaded the trees and came upon a mighty bower, half sun, half shade, where in the midst of a nurse and Clem and many toys a baby was enthroned on a rug. "There you are," said Alix. "There's my spice, devilry, scintillation and wit all done into one roly-poly."

"Well, I'm blowed," said Collingford, advancing cautiously on the young monarch. "Do you want me to—feel him or say anything about his looks? I'll have to think a minute if you do."

"Booby," said Alix, "come away."

But Collingford seemed fascinated. He squatted on the rug and poked the monarch's ribs. Nurse, mother and Clem flew to the rescue, but to their amazement the monarch did not bellow. He appropriated Collingford's finger. "I wonder if he'd mind if I called him a young 'un," soliloquized the attacking giant. Then he pulled the baby's leg. "When he grows up tell him I was the first man to pull his leg. My word, he hasn't a bone in his body, not even a tooth."

"Silly," said Clem. "Of course not." "What are you staring at him that way for?" said Alix. "Can a baby make you think? A penny for them." "I was just thinking," said Collingford gravely, "that a baby is positively the only thing I've never eaten."

A horrified silence greeted his remark. The nurse was the first to recover. She strode forward, gathered up the baby and marched away. Alix and Clem fixed their eyes on Collingford. He slowly withered and drew back.

Then the judge and Mrs. Lansing came out to them. Collingford was introduced. Mrs. Lansing turned to Alix. "Have you asked Mr. Collingford to stay to lunch? The judge has asked himself."

"No, mother," said Alix. "I'm afraid we couldn't give Honorable Percy anything new to eat. He says—"

"My dear Mrs. Lansing," interrupted Collingford, "it's all a mistake. I positively loathe eating new things, no matter how delicious and rosy and blue-eyed they look."

"Are you speaking of cabbages?" inquired the judge.

"No, babies," said Clem. "He wants to eat the baby."

Mrs. Lansing laughed. "I don't blame him," she said. "I've often wanted to eat him myself."

Collingford spent a good deal of his week at the Firs. Clem went to see the baby daily as a matter of course and he went along, as he said himself, as another matter of course. Clem talked to the baby, Collingford to Alix. He said to her one day, "I've read in books about babies doing this sort of thing to gad-about—"

"Gad-about," interrupted Alix, "is just, but cruel." "Well, butterflies," compromised Collingford. "But I never believed it really happened."

"Oh," said Alix, "it wasn't the baby. Not altogether. You see, Mr. Collingford, Gerry Lansing—I'm Mrs. Gerry—disappeared over a year ago—before the baby came. He thought I didn't love him. I might as well tell you about it. I believe in telling things. Mystery is always more dangerous than truth: it gives such a lead to imagination."

So she told him and Collingford listened, interested. At the end he said nothing. Alix looked at his thoughtful face. "What do you think? Isn't there a chance? Don't you think he's probably—probably alive?"

The judge was not there to hear the meek appeal of faith for comfort. Collingford met Alix's eyes frankly. "If I were you," he said, "I would probably believe as you do. I've met too many dead men in Piccadilly looking uncommonly well ever to say that a man is dead because he's disappeared. Then there's the other side of it. Bodsky says a man is never dead while there's anybody left that loves him."

"The judge told me about Bodsky. He's the man that said there had been lots of murderers he'd like to take to his club. He must be worth while. I'd like to talk to him."

"I don't suppose," said Collingford absently, "that Bodsky has talked to a woman since he killed his mistress."

"Pshaw!" exclaimed the young lady, impatiently. "I'm sure we'll miss the opening number. We're waited a good many minutes for that mother of mine."

"Hours, I should say," the young man retorted rather crossly.

"Ours? Oh, Henry!" she cried, and laid her blushing cheek upon his shirt front.

SUFFERED FROM LAME BACK, WEAK KIDNEYS AND DIZZINESS.

Dear Editor:—

Last winter I suffered terribly from lame back, weak kidneys and dizziness, and uric acid in the blood caused rheumatic pains. I sent to Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Hotel, N. Y., for his new remedy, "Anuric." As soon as the box of tablets came by mail I commenced taking them and reaped untold good from their use.

(Signed) Mrs. Kate Thompson.

Note:—This "Anuric" is adapted especially for kidney complaints and diseases arising from disorders of the kidneys and bladder, such as backache, weak back, rheumatism, dropsy, congestion of the kidneys, inflammation of the bladder, scalding urine and urinary troubles. The physicians and specialists at Dr. Pierce's great Institution, in Buffalo, N. Y., have thoroughly tested this prescription and have been with one accord successful in eradicating these troubles, and in most cases absolutely curing the diseased kidneys.

Patients having once used "Anuric" at Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Hotel, have repeatedly sent back for more. Such a demand has been created that Dr. Pierce has decided to put "Anuric" in the drug stores of this country, in a ready-to-use form. If not obtainable, send one dime by mail to Dr. Pierce for trial package, or 50 cents for full treatment.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is a blood cleanser and alterative that starts the liver and stomach into vigorous action. It thus assists in making rich, red blood, which feeds the heart, nerves, brain and all organs of the body. You feel clean, strong and strenuous—instead of tired, weak, and "all-in."—Advertisement.

Marrying for Money

By MRS. EVA LEONARD

More Fuel for the Fire of the Townsends' Domestic Infelicity.

"Oh, but I was proud of my husband, proud to have my friend know I had married a man who would refuse to send me money when I was sick, and who was so small that he actually sent me a ticket to come home on; would not give me the sight of money," Ortrude was revealing her mind the evening of her arrival.

"You may recall that I told you I could not afford to have you take a trip now. I am making a great effort to raise a large sum that I need imperatively in my business. I wish there were some way to make you see that there is a necessity to retrench," Jacob looked at her with cool deliberation before taking his paper.

"If you had the least imagination you would invent a new story. That is so threadbare, so hackneyed," Ortrude tossed her proud head and patted her elaborate coiffure.

"My friend, Eleanor assures me that it is a very common excuse for withholding money," but she also made it clear that if she insisted on having what she wanted, she got it, and nothing happened, showing conclusively that it was a mere excuse.

Continued Ortrude, as the conversation languished. Jacob's face was invisible behind his paper walls, and he made no response in the room and Ortrude, nettled by the cold silence of her husband, picked up a book and tried to read. Suddenly she dropped it to her lap and said:

"I called up the garage and asked to have my machine sent over to the depot when I arrived this afternoon and they said something about not having a machine there."

"Where are you keeping it?" "You have no machine. I sent it back," came in distinct tones from behind the newspaper.

"Sent it back? What are you talking about? Please explain," replied Ortrude, leaning forward and scarcely breathing.

"I could not make the payments on it," flouted out from behind the paper. "Jacob Townsend will you please put that paper down and explain what you mean?" Ortrude's eyes were blazing and she gripped the arms of her chair convulsively.

"I told you when you spoke of buying a machine that I could not afford it now. As usual, that made no difference with you. You went to Kansas City and selected your machine. I have told you before that I spent more money than I should have on this machine. If business had been as good as usual I could have recovered, but it has been—well, rotten, and I never have stood up under such household expenses."

"I did not know I was letting myself in for a resume of all your business affairs when I asked that question or I might have reconsidered. It was very short-sighted in you to send back that expensive machine. When I buy again—and I shall right away—I shall not be so easily satisfied. I shall have a machine that will be returned if sold."

Ortrude gasped. "So it's war, is it?" "You will testify that I have tried to establish a peace footing; to get things on a livable basis. You would not listen. I must try to keep the peace establishment from going on the rocks," Ortrude turned and, casting a scornful glance over her shoulder, left the room, ablaze with wrath. (To be continued.)

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) We are two girls of seventeen. One of us never had any company and the other has never had steady company, but I am around with a boy who is counted very respectable. A few weeks ago we were young to have company?

(2) If a boy has been running around with a girl for some time and has never asked to kiss her, does he care anything about her?

(3) Is it all right for a boy to put his arm around a girl? If it is not, should she say "don't" and move away?

(4) Is it all right for a girl to spoon with a boy? If it is not, should she say "don't" and move away?

(5) Is it all right for a girl to allow a boy to smoke or chew in her presence?

(6) Are girls thirteen years too young to correspond with boys with cards?

(7) You are very young, but if your parents approve of the boys I should think it would be all right to have company once in a while.

(8) He likes and respects her so much that he doesn't want to run the risk of losing her friendship by asking to kiss her.

(9) She shouldn't sit on davenport, porch swings, in hammocks or any place that would invite him to put his arm around her. If he should do it when she isn't expecting it she should say "don't" and move away.

(10) It is not all right for a girl to spoon no matter how long she has known the boy.

(11) A girl shows by her actions whether or not she is willing a boy should kiss her. If he kisses her without permission and she is genuinely angry she will think of things to say, but if she is really rather glad to be kissed, she will not say anything that will stop him.

(12) A girl of seventeen or eighteen should go with boys her own age.

(13) It is all right for her to let him smoke, but not chew.

(14) They are too young.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am sixteen years old and I have not had many boy friends. Just now there is only one boy who is coming to see me and he has only come once. Some of the girls at school are going to have a party and they want me to come and bring a boy. Do you think I would be all right for me to ask him? (2) Is it all right for a boy friend to take me to the movies with a chaperone? HONEY BEE.

(3) No.

(4) You are too young to go to the movies with a boy unless you are chaperoned.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: Can you tell me by what means I can overcome stiffness of the fingers? I do my own work and am trying to learn to play the piano. My instructor tells me that I do very well. But I am discouraged and think I could do better if I knew some way to overcome the stiffness. Do you think it is possible for one to become a successful pianist who does her own work?

ANNIE'S STUDENT.

To practice scale work will do more to overcome stiffness in your fingers than anything else. It would probably help to exercise your fingers by standing erect and with your arms at your sides clenching your hands and relaxing them ten times. If you practice the exercise too long at a time your muscles will get tired. Housework will not prevent your becoming a successful pianist.

(4) You are too young to go to the movies with a boy unless you are chaperoned.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: Can you tell me by what means I can overcome stiffness of the fingers? I do my own work and am trying to learn to play the piano. My instructor tells me that I do very well. But I am discouraged and think I could do better if I knew some way to overcome the stiffness. Do you think it is possible for one to become a successful pianist who does her own work?

ANNIE'S STUDENT.

To practice scale work will do more to overcome stiffness in your fingers than anything else. It would probably help to exercise your fingers by standing erect and with your arms at your sides clenching your hands and relaxing them ten times. If you practice the exercise too long at a time your muscles will get tired. Housework will not prevent your becoming a successful pianist.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am sixteen years old and I have not had many boy friends. Just now there is only one boy who is coming to see me and he has only come once. Some of the girls at school are going to have a party and they want me to come and bring a boy. Do you think I would be all right for me to ask him? He knows the other girls, because he is in our class at school.

BLUE-EYED MARIAN.

FOODS THEY BUILD OR DESTROY

Amazing but rarely suspected truths about the things you eat.

By ALFRED W. McCANN (Copyright, 1916, by Alfred W. McCann.)

A simple experiment that reveals the subtle activity of Mineral Salts in the life processes of the human body.

Here is a little experiment which can be performed in the laboratory of any high school by a boy or girl. It will help you to grasp some idea of the minerals after they have been introduced into the human body.

First, cut a tablet of citrate of lithium. Then take a clean platinum wire. Hold the wire in a blue Bunsen flame. It will be seen that the wire gives no coloration to the flame.

Now pass the platinum wire along the side of the forehead or across the palm; return it to the flame and note the beautiful yellow fire of sodium, showing the mineral at work in the elimination processes of the body.

Without sodium to take up the carbonic acid, elaborated through the digestion of sugars and starches, as a poisonous waste product that must be removed from the body, this acid, better known as carbonic dioxide, would accumulate in the tissues and destroy them.

That is the reason that the excessive use of denatured sugars, table syrups, and starches in the diet of America is followed by many serious diseases which will be described later.

Sodium is one of the food minerals indispensable to health. The little platinum wire and the Bunsen flame reveal it at work in the performance of one of its many functions.

Now take a blue glass, which will filter out some of the light rays that interfere with our vision, and look through it at the flame of the Bunsen burner. Note the beautiful blue of potassium, showing this mineral also at work in the elimination processes of the body.

A study of the food minerals indicates very clearly that potassium helps to keep the tissues flexible and active while at the same time assisting the sodium to carry off the carbonic acid manufactured as one of the end-products of combustion in the tissues of life.

We shall assume now that a half tablet of citrate of lithium has been consumed. For our purposes it will be well to wait a half hour.

We shall now again clean the platinum wire thoroughly. Again we hold it over the forehead or across the palm of the hand. We place it in the flame. It is colored a vivid red. This is the flame of lithium.

In one short hour the lithium, taken through all the ways of the body, and by-ways of the human body and has appeared in its marvelous journey upon the surface of the skin.

ROCKFORD SLIPS OUT OF SATURDAY'S GAME

West Side Browns to Play Cardinals
Instead of Co. K. of Rockford.

On Saturday night the Lakota Cardinals will play the Chicago West Side Browns again, as Rockford Company K. decided they did not care to contest the Janesville team at this date, as was at first agreed. It appears that Rockford does not desire to risk their record against the Lakotas without Young, their star guard, as this player left Co. K. for the time being, to play with Co. E on their tour into Minnesota to clash with the Red Wing Giants.

When Young returns Company K., with their full strength, will meet the Lakotas, and the long disputed question of which is the best five, will be settled. The change is a disappointment at the present time, for the baseball fans would like nothing better than to see these two teams in action, for the Lakotas are confident that they could trim the Illinois champions, either at the auditorium or at the Rockford Armory.

The West Side Browns played here on January 29th and lost by the score of 40 to 28. The first half score ended 16 to 13 and the game up until the last five minutes of play was hotly contested. The Browns, with a new forward, their star man, will attempt to avenge this defeat. They are a clean, fast team and play real western basketball with a brilliant attack of passing with very little dribbling.

MILWAUKEE RING ARTISTS MINGLE AT SOCIAL AFFAIR: STOUT IN A FULL DRESS

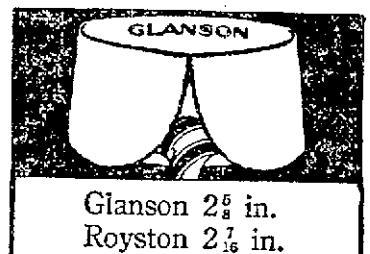

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE)
Milwaukee, Feb. 23.—The pugs of Milwaukee will mix tonight, not in a ring, but socially at West Side Turn hall. Mayor G. A. Badger will lead the grand march. Joe Orsine and Harry Stout, referees, are going to be there in dress suits. All available policemen have been detailed to the hall to break up any arguments which might mar the party. The proceeds of the event will be sent to Jack Dougherty, one-time prominent Milwaukee boxer, who is now sick and up against an empty pocket.

ANDRE ANDERSON SCORES STEWART IN SIX ROUNDS

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE)
New York, Feb. 23.—Since shaking off the dust of Chicago for New York, Andre Anderson has found his knockout wallop, and he added another to his growing list, as he floored Jim Stewart, the Brooklyn veteran, in six rounds Tuesday afternoon. George Chip lost on a foul to Young Ahearn in the fifth round of their fight. Chip had scored a knockdown early in the fight and was leading all the way when the referee stopped the fight because of the low blow.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE)
New York, Feb. 23.—Inter-league baseball games between the clubs of the National and American leagues will be a feature of the coming training season. Close to forty such contests are scheduled to be played before the opening of the 1916 season. A majority of the sixteen big circuit teams will figure in the matches. Many of the games will be played on Southern diamonds although several of the clubs have parks after the return from the training camps.

DILLON TOOK NAME FROM A RACE HORSE

E. C. Price, Alias Jack Dillon, the Hoosier Mankiller, Took Pleasure in Beating Cowler.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE)
Indianapolis, Feb. 23.—Only the home crowd knows how many thousands of dollars in publicity meant to Jack Dillon to be mentioned in the same breath with Jess Dillon, Jack, the bearcat and mankiller, never had a publicity agent. He never has had a manager who knew the game. He's a self-made boxer.

The only kind of boxing allowed in this town is the hot stove kind, and when the fans gather round they tell stories of Ernest Cutler Price, who, as Dillon, has placed Indianapolis on the sport map against her will. Dillon probably is the only topnotch athlete in any branch who deliberately chose the name of a horse for his own. When Ernest was a skinny kid he used to frequent the barn where Sidney Dillon, sire of a long string of good trotters, held forth. His friendship for the horse caused him to take that name.

Jack is a silent fighter, too. He goes into the toughest contest and never says a word. He keeps his head down and works silently, depending on his ruggedness and fighting spirit to win. When asked a question about a fight, with set jaw and a gleam in his eye he remarks:

"I'm going into that fight to knock him out." Jack always tries for a knockout. When the sport hours were refused to "see" Jack, his friends tried to argue him into taking on a new manager, but Jack steadfastly refused to drop his old friend Sam Murrberger.

Only the home guard understood what it meant to Dillon to knock out Tom Cowler, Jim Corbett's protege. Local boys remember back in the spring of 1910 when Gentleman Jim, who was entertaining the idea that he could wear the title from Jack Johnson, came here in his vaudeville circuit. While here Jim announced his "come back" and intended to demonstrate his skill at the Marion club.

Shortly before Corbett's arrival Price had borrowed his fighting name. He was little more than a welterweight and unknown outside the city. His friends got him the chance for a try-out against the great Corbett.

Dillon showed enough to make Corbett take off his gloves and forget his some back aspirations, but in doing so he seemingly acquired the name of champ's enemy. Since that time Corbett has steadfastly refused to "see" Jack. Thus Dillon got more out of the fight than he showed on the surface, for he floored the champion while grooming for the heavyweight championship. Jack was twenty-five the day he met Cowler.

Dillon's record, though fraught with knockouts, is an eccentric document conforming to the mood of a temperamental fighter. The Hoosier lad has changed in recent months and became more business-like, but in the earlier seasons of his exciting career it was well known in fighting circles that Jack Dillon didn't feel like fighting he wouldn't fight. On the other hand he frequently went into the ring feeling rock and ready to grinch on the luckless weight before him.

There's one incident in the mankiller's career that never fails to cause him considerable ink. That is the bout with Chicago Knockout Brown in St. Louis, which the fans tossed their chairs at the arc lights and Referee Eddie Randall jumped out of the ring declaring the fight the veriest hippodrome. It was a tame bout and Dillon claimed his hands were sore and said anyhow he had Brown carry the fight to him whenever he fought the Greek, which in those days was often. The management took the money from Dr. Al Marbarger and tied up their $750 purse, which still remains in the sheriff's custody in the Mount City.

This incident was soon forgotten, however, and the demand for Dillon's services throughout the country was steady and strong. He flitted from one town to another, never figuring in large purses and always fighting apparently as a true son of battle.

MORRIS MILLER

Bill Brennan, caught in the Federal league landslide and barred as unpure by the majors, has blossomed out as a stakeholder at the New Orleans race track, earning $16 daily. Brennan works at the track every day except Sundays, when he acts as a trap in the winter league for $10 a game.

Bob Bescher, outfielder of the Cardinals, who planned to have a crooked finger amputated last fall, is under doctor's advice. The finger was reset and kept in splints for several months and now Bescher reports that it will be about as good as ever.

The annual baseball game between Yale and the New York Giants scheduled for April 11 has been transferred from the Polo grounds to the Yale bowl by an agreement reached between the Giants and the managers of the Yale nine. It will mark the first appearance of a major league team on a Yale field.

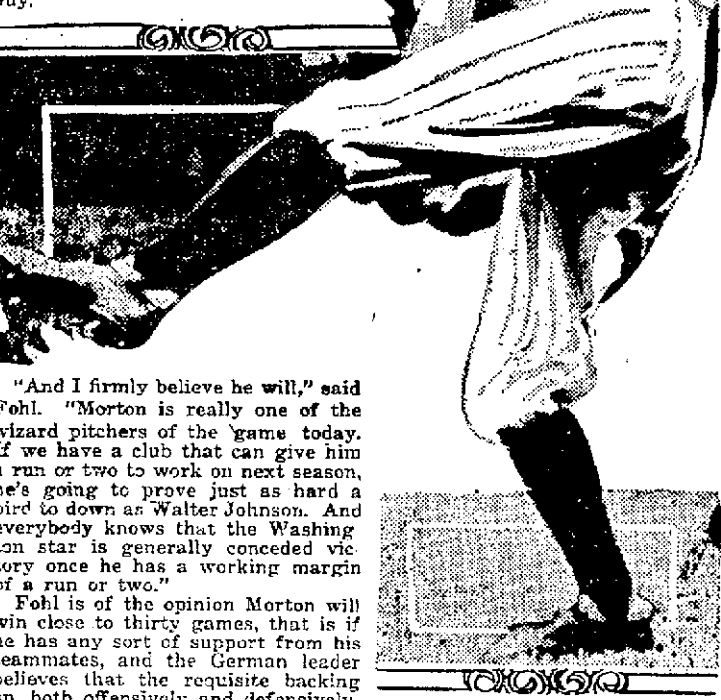

Connie Mack is said to be figuring on Perkins, his young catcher, to be a star this year. This youth and Schang will do the catching for the Athletics. Mack having given up the idea that Schang is a third baseman or anything else but a backstop. Perkins comes from the North Carolina league and is only 20 years of age.

Manager McGraw regards Joe Kenney, the Notre Dame catcher, as a most promising player. He kept Ken under cover during the few weeks he was with the club at the end of last

INDIANS PIN HOPES TO PITCHER MORTON

The Cleveland Indians are very evidently a badly disorganized team, but the fans of Cleveland expect wonders from Pitcher Guy Morton. Guy displayed wonderful improvement in his work last season over 1914, and he's expected to be even better the coming season.

Morton writes Manager Lee Fohl that he is in tiptop condition and is anxiously awaiting the call to arms. "I'm going to put Cleveland on the baseball map next season, if my good right arm does not fail me," writes Guy.

Guy Morton.

And I firmly believe he will," said Fohl. "Morton is really one of the wizard pitchers of the game today. If we have a club that can give him a run or two to work on next season, he's going to prove just as hard a bird to down as Walter Johnson. And everybody knows that the Washington star is generally conceded victory once he has a working margin of a run or two."

Fohl is of the opinion Morton will win close to thirty games, that is if he has any sort of support from his teammates, and the German leader believes that the requisite backing up, both offensively and defensively, will be forthcoming.

Lee Magee, since becoming a Yankee, has, it is reported, suggested to Capt. T. J. Huston that the Yanks give up the Polo grounds and move over to the former Fed park in Brooklyn. Magee is sure that his personality in Brooklyn will mean increased attendance if the change is made.

Steve Brodie, veteran outfielder, and last year drawing salary as a scout for the Baltimore Reds, has taken on his duties as coach of the baseball squad at the naval academy at Annapolis. One of Steve's first duties will be to instruct the middies in the necessity of being loyal to obligations.

Groundkeepers in the National league will be glad to hear that Hub Perdue has passed on. Hub used to have a habit of pawing up the ground around the pitcher's slub like a mad bull, and many a groundkeeper has squirmed and cursed the Gallatin Squash as a result of his turf beating performances.

The Philadelphia National league club has released Pitcher Mattison to the Syracuse club of the New York State league. Mattison joined the Phillies in 1914, coming from an independent team in Pennsylvania, which he had managed for several years.

It is now Ray Fisher, professor of the science of pitching. The Yankee writer has been engaged by the Y. M. C. A. college of Springfield, Mass., to give a course in the art of twirling as part of the department of athletics of the institution.

A rumor from Boston has it that Manager Miller Huggins of the Cardinals has made a trade proposition

CONGS WIN CONTEST WITH PRESBY FIVE; BAPTIST TEAM WINS

Congregationalists and Baptists Both
Win Games Last Night at High School.

Two exciting church league basketball contests were played last night at the high school gymnasium. The first game played was between the Presbyterians and the Congregationalists, which resulted in a victory for the Congs. The final score of the contest was 28 to 16. The winners of this contest had the shade on the scoring department. The absence of Lamb in the Presbyterian lineup was possibly one reason why they were defeated. He is a good shot at the basket and would have undoubtedly helped very much. Dave McCullough was the scoring machine for his team and registered most of their points. Lineup:

Presbyterians—McCullough, c; Lowry, Fisher, guards; McDowell and Kronitz, forwards.

Baptists Win.
With a qualified team the Baptists went out on the floor with a strong five last night and won from the English Lutherans by a score of 12 to 6. Both teams played a fighting game, that being the reason for the score being so low. Rasmussen was again the light of his team when he got into the scoring end of the game. The Baptist men played a good game and they ought to run strong against the leaders of the league in the remaining games to be played. Following are lineups:

Baptists—Douglas, c; Pond and Drew, forwards; Eller and Badger, guards.

English Lutherans—Selken, c; G. and J. Rasmussen, forwards; Detmer, Brummond and Schooff, guards.

WORKING MAN OF ENGLAND IS VERY PROSPEROUS NOW.

London, Feb. 23.—"In my forty years' experience, I have never known a time when there was so much money about among the working classes," is the testimony of a pawnbroker doing business in a district of London where a large factored. His testimony is supported by the jewellers, merchants, and variety and moving picture theatres in the neighborhood. They all say the workers were never so prosperous, or spent their money so freely—except that they don't call on pawnbrokers as they used to.

In this district there are 6,000 women and girls employed in munition work, and they are the free spenders, amount of army materials are many. Most of them are the wives of soldiers and receive separation allowances from the government, which increases their incomes.

An Investment Rather Than an Expense

Advertising an auction in the Gazette is a profitable investment rather than an expense. Every sale that is so advertised is an evidence of that statement.

Hanover, Wis., Feb. 16, 1916.

The Janesville Gazette, Janesville, Wis.:

Thought I would drop you a few lines letting you know of the splendid success of my sale.

I think it paid to advertise through the Janesville Gazette, as I had an immense crowd, and everything sold good. Our machinery went high, some articles bringing more than I paid for them. The horses also sold high and the cows brought an immense price.

Thanking you for your past favors and courtesies shown me, I remain yours truly,
